

Roger Freestone BA. Cert Ed.
Director Chief Examiner Equivalency Testing

I am a lecturer in Mathematics and have taught in Further Education for more than twenty-five years; during this time I have taught all levels of Mathematics.

For a number of years I was the GCSE co-ordinator, currently I am the Co-ordinator for the Access to Health and Science programme. I also carry out internal verification for the course, and have been the external moderator for North East London University.

My role within Equivalency Testing has three facets. I am the Director Chief Examiner and support the home study students who have decided to take the opportunity to practice and prepare for the exam.

I enjoy working with our students it is very rewarding to know that we have contributed to helping them pass their examination thus enabling them to have their career in teaching.
